

FIRST OKLAHOMA BANK PRESENTS
Business Leaders with Heart

John Rothrock is a problem solver, dedicated to hard work, quality, and innovative customer service... as well as a kind heart. Since 1944, Yale Cleaners has been keeping Tulsa a cleaner place as customers have come to depend on the family-owned dry-cleaning business.

“Our commitment is to always strive to improve the experience of the customer and employees,” says John Rothrock, president of Yale Cleaners. “The work we do involves the most important events and days of people’s lives. That’s why we are constantly looking for ways to innovate and be better than we are today.”

That thankfulness overflows into giving back to the community. “I was raised to believe in the value and importance of giving back to those who need it the most. We’re very blessed as a company to be supported by our community and share our resources,” Rothrock says.

Yale Cleaners annually supports Coats for Kids (in partnership with The News on 6 and Catholic Charities) by helping clean and give nearly 12,000 coats to at-risk children and families.

They also helped found Jenks CarePoint, which provides free clothing to families in need within the Jenks Public Schools district. “John sees what needs to be done and doesn’t wait until the coach calls him into the game,” says Tom Bennett III, president of First Oklahoma Bank. “His generosity coupled with his business expertise has been a huge help to the community, especially for Jenks CarePoint. Knowing the importance of having properly cleaned clothes, Yale Cleaners installed a commercial 55-pound washer and 80-pound dryer to help wash clothing donated to the center.”

The growth of Yale Cleaners and its community outreach is cemented on a strong banking relationship with First Oklahoma Bank, which has shown unwavering support in helping his business achieve its goals, Rothrock says. “They’ve helped us fund our dreams.”
